About the Organizers

The PoleQueens Exotic Pole Dance & VelvetWings Exotic Aerial Competition is organized by the Arts for Pole Sport Foundation (MaRA). The Foundation was established in 2022 to support those interested in pole sport and competitors by organizing competitions, workshops, camps and other events. The founder is Barbara Palmaffy, who is also responsible for the Pole Artistic Hungary competition, which has been held since 2015.

Introduction of the Championship

The PoleQueens Exotic Pole Dance & VelvetWings Exotic Aerial Championship will be held in Hungary. Its aim is to provide an opportunity not only for professional audiences but also to introduce this deservedly increasingly popular genre to a wider audience. The entrants present their performance in platform dancing shoes in exotic style, on 4 levels, in 4 categories. It is a one-round competition. Due to the characteristics of the venue, the event provides informal entertainment for all those interested, while the competitors can test their skills in front of recognized judges. The championship is open to competitors of any nationality and representing any pole dancing school, studio or organization, as well as individual applicants.

PoleQueens is opening its doors to aerial artists – like never before!

Bring your own aerial equipment of choice and show us what you're capable of in the air! Be it a hoop, silk, hammock, trapeze, chains, or any other aerial prop – you're welcome to soar with us.

VelvetWings rules and classification

The competition will follow the same rules and level classification system as the PoleQueens pole dance categories. Placements will not necessarily be announced per apparatus – for separate ranking within the same aerial equipment, a minimum of 3 participants is required. If fewer compete in a given category, results will be announced in a combined format, regardless of the type of aerial gear or gender.

Categories

In all categories, the performance must be presented in platform dance shoes. On the stage, 1 pole (4 meters high) will be available, which can be fixed or spinning. The competitor will need to combine the ratio of pole tricks and floorwork elements according to the style of the category they apply to.

Exotic Fly (Flow)

The emphasis is on continuous, soft, elegant, flowing movements. The most important thing is the quality of the connections in the choreography, which includes poses, flow and floorwork. Slow flowing movements from one element to another, which are based on impulses and create the feeling of a slow flow consisting of movements. The load on the shoes is minimal, the dance creates a weightless, floating impression with 'skating' movements. The ratio of tricks on the pole /aerial prop and choreography on the floor is optional, recommended pole /aerial prop usage is approximately 30-40%. This category does not require advanced pole /aerial tricks. The rhythm of the music and choreography can alternate, and it is even necessary to maintain attention.

Exotic Rock (Hard)

This category is for those who like the 'Koda-style', which are characterized by dynamic, rhythmic and hard forms of movement, 'lumpy' steps. The whole performance should sparkle, the tricks on the pole/aerial prop and floorwork choreography should alternate densely and dynamically. This style is less regulated. For example, the usage of full sole is also allowed. There is no such as 'slow hard', dynamics here is essential. Recommended pole/aerial prop usage is approximately 40-50%.

Díva (Old school)

This is the 'Australian', classical style. In this category, the emphasis is much more on choreography than tricks. Old School returns to the roots of pole dancing, the style of striptease dancers. Sensual, feminine, passionate. The art of seduction, suggestiveness is expected. The performer should arouse the longing of the audience. Let the performance include undressing (taking into account the rules of the competition). Recommended pole usage is approximately 30-40%.

ShowGirl

This category is dominated by the show, not by the tricks. The contestants can unleash their imagination and creativity both in execution and stage visuals. The more captivating the performance is, the better! It is mandatory to use accessories (e.g. boa, chair, fan etc.). Pole/aerial prop usage is about 20-30%. Be sparkly, theatrical like a Hollywood diva!

Frame up

Frame up is a unique, innovative dance style created by Russian dancer and choreographer Nastya Yurasova that combines modern and acrobatic style with sensual manifestation. Passionate and provocative, it is a beautiful symphony of movements and beats. This category is open for those competitors who would like to perform in this style. The use of pole is not a mandatory requirement.

ExoFree

In the 'ExoFree' category you don't get scorings and there is no distinction based on skill level; we just enjoy your show. If you want to show yourself and your choreo, but don't want to be scored, then this category is for you!

Manyi Deák, Krisztina Nemesvári and Barbara Holler-Rácz contributed to defining the styles of the competition.

The jury reserves the right, after an objective assessment, to place the contestants in another category if they did not enter the right one.
